INEQUALITY OF INCOME FROM PENSION SCHEMES

Inequality of income from pen-Inequality of income from pension scheme for the elderly should be examined by the Federal Government because some people receive income from as many as five separate pensions, while countless others have to exist on only the Government old age pension of $82.88, plus supplement in some case.

To illustrate: one woman receives the war widow's pension of $227,92 from a deceased husband who got the maximum disability pension. She also gets a Government pension from the husband's previous occupafrom the nusband's previous occupa-tion as a civil servant. She herself works for a public service organiza-tion which has its own pension scheme, from which she will collect on retire-ment. She will also collect from the ment. She will also collect from the Canada pension plan and the old age pension. The $227.92 war widow's pension, plus the $82.88 old age pension amounts to $310.80 before she even starts to collect from the other three. Total income from pensions here could run as high as $500 monhly. How many more are similarly placed? This is all legitimate, of course, but is it fair when another widow, just as worthy and deserving, is obliged to exist on only $82.88—which even with recent increases and the supplement is still below the poverty line.

What about fairness too when What about fairness too when thrifty pensioners who came through the depression and sacrificed and denied themselves in order to accumulate small savings, now find these modest savings disqualifies them for the supplement, yet Government provides pensions to those with incomes of $25 to $50,000 and up.

An overhaul of pension legisla-tion is long overdue.

If you want to live in the kind of town
Like the kind of town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.

For you'd only find what you left

For you'd only find what you left behind
There's nothing that's really new,
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town,
It isn't the town it's YOU.

Real town are not made of men afraid When everyone works and nobody shirks You can raise a town from the dead.

And if while you make your personal stake

Vour neighbor may make one too,
You can make a town what you want it to be
--IT ISN'T THE TOWN -- IT'S
YOU.

An explanation of the non-arrival of last weeks paper to some subscribers: When in the progress of printing the gasoline engine developed a stubborn streak and refused to revolve. Expert advice was sought gentle words were used, language more powerful was employed, coaxing was resorted to, reason was tried but the machine sullenly refused to work. The head engineer was away and on his arrival back on Saturday, he examined the battery and the compression and saw there was gasoline, gave the wheel a turn and the engine began as if nothing was wrong. To all who did not receive a copy last week, your subscription will be extended one week.
