RESTON—The executive and visitors of the New Democratic Party of Arthur Constituency met March 23rd in Birnie's Cafe, Reston.

Meeting of Redvers Veterinary board

REDVERS—The Board of the Redvers Veterinary Service District met on March 15th. All members were present, Nelson Harvey, Fertile; Clarence Purvis, Redvers; John Hitchcock, Maryfield and Percy Cowan, Aids.

The board members agreed to report to their respective municipal councils the need to purchase a loading chute and cattle restraining chute to enable the Veterinarian to handle cattle brought to his office for operations.

The secretary was authorized to put advertisements in the papers regarding sick calls being made to Dr. Staden before 9:00 a.m. to enable the Doctor to plan his calls more efficiently.

The board re-confirmed the practice of a charge being made in cases of cancellation of emergency calls if Dr. Staden had already started to the farm.

A discussion was held on large animal clinics. The increasing number of clinics being built seems to indicate that some time in the future a clinic at Redvers may become a necessity in order to have a Veterinarian at Redvers to serve the district. A study of these clinics will be made at every opportunity.

Financially the Club also had a most successful season and the Club treasurer, Lloyd Johnston reported a bank balance of about $300.00.

Evaluation studied at teachers' meeting

VIRDEN—There is a growing concern today among educators regarding the whole field of student evaluation. Why do we evaluate? What are the methods of evaluation being used at present? How might these methods be improved upon? These were some of the questions under study when the one-hundred and fifty teachers and administrators of the Fort La Bosse School Division gathered at Virden Collegiate Institute on Thursday, March 16.

Mr. Kris Breckman, Director of Professional Development with the Manitoba Teachers' Society, set the stage for the day's proceedings in his opening presentation. Evaluation of the students, he stressed, must involve a great more than the assigning of marks to written tests administered periodically during the school year.

The remainder of the day was devoted to three group sessions, each of one hour's duration, and each concentrated upon a particular aspect of the main topic. Leaders for these sessions, in addition to Mr. Breckman, were Mrs. Margaret Bean and Mr. John Gisiger, Assistant Directors of Professional Development with the Manitoba Teachers' Society.

The groups dealt with the subjects of attitude and its implications, why and how we test, and evaluating the classroom's learning environment. Throughout the day, teachers were given the opportunity to discuss and to take part in stimulating and thought-provoking exercises related to student evaluation.

ALSTONE NOTES

by E. J. Guthrie

Rev. Schurman's sermon on Sunday was on the King's highway, the road the Jesus travelled on his way to Jerusalem. A nice gathering attended in spite of dull snowy morning.

Mrs. J. P. (Mary) Harrison visited with Miss Jackson part of an afternoon the last time she was down to Reston from Sinclair.

Bill and Jean McEwen, of Sinclair, called at Alstone on Saturday afternoon. Bill brought along some tape recordings of himself on the violin with Bea Gately as accompanist. We all knew Bea was pint sized but we never realized that she would fit in such a small box. Specially with Bill McEwen being as long as he is.

The Charlie Stewarts, and Mrs. Bill Stewart, Charlie Ashley's sister visited with Charlie at Alstone on Saturday afternoon. Charlie also had a visit at the John Kurta's one day last week.

Some of us attended the picture show in the Theatre on Thursday night which we thought was very good.

The Ecumenical Service held in the United Church on Friday night wasn't as well attended as it might have been. There seemed to be a lot of things going on that night. A nice representation attended from the Anglican Church. Rev. Schur-man conducted the service and Rev. Heister showed pictures on some of the hymns, explaining about them and why they were written.

Four of us from Alstone attended the Collegiate Drama Festival on Saturday night, consisting of three one-act plays, namely, The Bathroom Door, The Storm and Lounabelle which were directed by Mrs. Marlin, Mrs. Henderson and Baldwin Kemkaren. Those who played the various parts did them so well and seemed natural for the various parts they played, which made it so enjoyable for everyone present. Genial John Russell president of the student council was M. C. and did the job most pleasingly and pleasantly. We would like also to take off our hats to a goodly number of fellow students who got behind him and gave a good deal of needed and valuable help. Thanks kids for a wonderful nights entertainment. Also thanks to Terry Sharrett, Carol Ellis and Donna Lynn Downing who entertained at intermissions.

Elizabeth was in the biscuit factory again on Monday.

Miss Jackson is expecting a friend from Regina to visit for a couple of days on her way through to Brandon.

Leo and Lucille Curtis, of Brandon and daughter Laurie and granddaughter Donna called at Alstone on Saturday to visit with Aunt Jessie. They are looking hale and hearty after their visit to the west coast.

J. E. has been sticking pretty close to home for the last few days on account of the rough weather. But the sun is out today, so he is liable to break loose again any time.

For 116 years the patrons and management of McSorley's Old Ale House in New York have fought a hard and running battle to keep women out. Now, with one stroke of his pen, John Lindsay, the mayor has signed a law forcing McSorley's, along with other men only bars and restaurants to admit women.

Stretch hay supply

WINNIPEG—Livestock producers can stretch hay supplies this spring by substituting grain or straw and still keep a balanced ration.

Dr. Ron McLaren, Manitoba Department of Agriculture livestock nutritionist, points out that cattle and sheep need a basic amount of roughage in their ration. "But," he adds, "there's a certain minimum amount of roughage which you can get away with feeding animals without running into trouble."

He puts the minimum amount of roughage for mature cows at four to six pounds per day, for calves and yearlings at two to four pounds per day and for sheep at half a pound per day. Dr. McLaren stresses that at these low roughage levels, animals need grain to get enough energy to meet their maintenance requirements.

He recommends that beef cows before calving get 6 to 10 pounds of grain per day, depending on condition, and after calving get 10 to 14 pounds per day. For calves and yearlings, he recommends four to six pounds of grain per day.

He says the grain can be wheat, oats or barley or a mixture of these. He recommends that wheat be fed in combination with oats or barley. And he adds that the grain should be rolled or coarsely chopped.

Another way to stretch roughage supplies this spring is feeding straw. But Dr. McLaren reminds producers that if straw is used to replace good hay, one additional pound of grain should be fed for each three pounds of straw used to replace equal quantities of hay.

The M.D.A. animal nutritionist says that when enough straw is available, producers can feed it on a free-choice basis as the only roughage.

According to Dr. McLaren, straw contains very little protein, so a 27 to 32 percent protein supplement should be fed along with grain to all classes of cattle at the rate of one pound per head per day and to ewes at the rate of one quarter pound per head per day if straw is the only roughage fed.

2 THE RESTON RECORDER

Reston, Man., Mar. 30, 1972

The same levels of a commercial protein supplement should be fed when cattle and sheep are getting the bare minimum amount of low quality hay rather than a minimum amount of high quality, Dr. McLaren stresses.

He reminds producers that vitamins and minerals are also necessary to maintain a balanced ration on minimum levels of roughage, straw or low quality hay.

He suggests a good commercial beef-sheep salt-mineral mix fed free choice as a good way to provide adequate minerals.

He recommends the following rates of vitamins A to be fed per head daily, calves and yearlings, 5000-8000 I.U.; cows (during the last two months of pregnancy and during lactation until good pasture is available), 40,000 I.U.; sheep (ewes and lambs), 2000 I.U.

WHAT WOULD WE DO WITHOUT IT?

The Community Rink closed for the season on Monday after a long, busy and successful season. No count is available as to the number of hockey matches, curling games and other activities that took place there during the season but there were many indeed.

The hockey schedule included a senior team in the Souris Valley League, the Oak Lake Indian Reserve team in the Dacotah League and a full slate of minor hockey teams involved in league play. Other hockey activity included the 6th annual midget hockey tournament which was again a big success.

In addition to the hockey there was the activity of the Reston Figure Skating Club with a professional instructor and also some pleasure skating, which was somewhat subdued, due to the heavy demand for ice time by the hockey teams and figure skaters.

On the curling side of the arena, activities got underway early in November with the men's, ladies, seniors, high school and later mixed curling.

Bonspels were numerous and include: the men's, ladies, mixed, Legion, Lions, high school, public school, the Lion's zone play-off and the first annual seniors bonspiel which was indeed a success.

All this activity took a lot of work on the part of many volunteers including the rink committee, the minor hockey committee, senior hockey club, figure skating club, the booth committee and many others. And probably the most important factor in the successful season was due to the work of the genial manager John Morrice, his wife Teena and assistant Russell Morrice, who put many, many hours of work in.

All, of which brings us to conclusion that Reston (and for that matter, all towns in Manitoba) would be quiet indeed in the winter months if it were not for the activities at the rink.

THREE OF FIVE CARS ON ROAD CAN'T PASS A SAFETY CHECK

Approximately 60 per cent of the cars now on the highways cannot pass a safety inspection according to Phil Farmer, Executive Director of the Canada Safety Council.

That is the average percentage of cars that fail the first time in the compulsory tests which are carried out in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia. Partial compulsory test systems also exist in Ontario and Quebec and a pilot project is underway in Manitoba.

The malfunctions found are most frequently: defective brakes, steering, lighting and other equally potentially dangerous faults.

Part of the reason for these defects are that mechanical faults develop gradually. Motorists do not realize, for instance, how bad there brakes are until there is an emergency—and it's too late.

Improper maintenance can be traced in almost all of the mechanical malfunctions that have resulted in accidents. Mechanical defects are the cause of about 10 per cent of the total number of auto accidents in Canada. The significance of this is startling when one looks at statistics. There are about 500,000 accidents on the public roads each year; more than 5,000 persons dies and more than 175,000 are injured.

The Canada Safety Council is trying to make drivers more aware of potential dangers in their automobiles. Any success in its effort is sure to cut down on the number of accidents.

occurred March 22 on the west side of Reston; still another, March 24, on the H. Barkman farm, where a Meadowlark, too, appeared March 21. About half a dozen Siskins, small brown and yellow, heavily streaked Finch-like birds, have been seen on the A. E. Wilkins lot until recently. And since March 26, a pair of Slate-colored Juncos have been visiting our bird-feeding station. As a third member of these neatly marked slate-grey and white birds is a visitor at Mrs. F. McMurphy's feeder tray, it seems reasonable that a wave of Juncos may soon be expected through the area. Energetic twittering notes, and light snacks or clicks are sure signs that you hear Juncos close by. Patient waiting will likely be rewarded by the sight of one or two of these smartly-tailored and cheerful guests flitting into view.

During a sunny spell about two weeks ago, Roy Campbell spotted a badger out enjoying the fine weather. This sighting comes as no surprise, for badgers are not hibernators, and hunt frequently through the season. Even though he can be rather disliked for the ability to dig as many as 20 holes in a summer night, badgers are valuable to farmers by living on mice, gophers of all kinds, skunks (if driven by extreme hunger) and, in warmer regions, prairie dogs and poisonous snakes.

The Editor's Notebook

Old Man Winter proved that he still has a kick, and after the weekend the fields are again snow covered. The storm that brought the snow was centered over the Dakotas, so southern Manitoba was the only part of the province affected by the storm. Lots of ducks and geese in the area according to reports reaching the Recorder, which proves as weather prophets they aren't so hot, leaving the warm south to arrive in the cold snow covered north, just doesn't seem to make sense . . .

Another thing there's lots of in this country is belling, we had quite a lot of offers during the past week and are happy to report our needs have been filled . . .

The local curling season wound up on Monday afternoon after the senior curling club played their last scheduled game. Except for the rather small entry in the men's bonspiel, it has been a most successful season. The ladies' spiel had 44 rinks, seven more than last year and the first annual seniors' bonspiel was very successful, and no doubt will be even better next year. The scheduled curling too, was good, so all in all it was a pretty good season. So now, after the Virden spiel this week, we are going to twirl our broom three times around our head and let it go, and besides, some of the skips I curled with this winter claim it's worn out anyway.

Items of interest are welcome. Send them to Reston at St. Regis Hotel, Winnipeg 1.

Read James 5: 13-20

May God be gracious to us and bless us and make his face to shine upon us, that thy way may be known upon earth . . . —Psalm 67: 1-2

When we speak of World Day of Prayer, our tendency has been to emphasize the last word in the title to the neglect of the first. It is hard to think of the world, of God's love for it, and our responsibility to it. For this reason prayer is more likely to be an escape into self-concern than a commitment to our brothers around the world.

Many persons, by training and habit, close their eyes when they pray. In our praying we might be more honest and effective if we had our eyes wide open to the pain, the perplexity, the poverty of the world; and our hearts open to God's direction for the healing ministry of the gospel.

Is it not unrealistic and unchristian to pray for God's mercy while we shut our eyes to wrongs we might help to right and to distress we might relieve?

The warning of the prophet Amos is still valid: "Woe to those who are at ease . . . those who feel secure . . . but are not grieved over the ruin of Joseph!"

PRAYER: God, as we claim Thy fatherhood, help us not to disclaim our brotherhood! Deliver us from the evil of being satisfied in our comfort when so many of Thy children suffer discomforts of many kinds. For the sake of Christ. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

As we proclaim the fatherhood of God, let us live the brotherhood of man.

Regional Analysis Program successful

WINNIPEG—The regional analysis program for southern Manitoba—termed the most detailed ever undertaken for any large area in Canada—has completed the first phase of its operations, reports Industry and Commerce Minister Len Evans.

For the past two months, residents of 75 southern Manitoba communities (excluding Greater Winnipeg) have received detailed information on their community's economic position and prospects from a research team organized by the Manitoba Department of Industry and Commerce.

Through the use of maps, charts, slides, verbal presentations and general discussions, southern Manitobans have been provided with such varied information as population shifts over the past 20 years, the role of manufacturing and agriculture in each area, available services and facilities and the general attitude of residents to their community.

Mr. Evans said that community response has been excellent, with more than 10,000 southern Manitobans in attendance at the various public meetings conducted by his department in the 75 communities.

He said this showed hope for the future, as the program was heavily geared to massive community participation. "It is the government's firm intention," he declared, "that any development program devised for southern Manitoba bear the true stamp of its residents' desires and intentions."

The role of the provincial government is to assist, by making available essential information but it is up to the various communities through their local committees to come up with firm proposals for action.

He said that with the completion of the basic information stage, the regional analysis program can decentralize its operations, giving each community time to evaluate the information it has received through his department.

Already, several community committees have established sub-committees to examine local prospects for agriculture, tourism, community services, industrial development, management and business training, adult education, water control and irrigation and a host of other topics of direct concern to these communities.

From these local meetings, the communities will recommend their own set of specific priorities free of any outside direction, although staffs of the Manitoba Departments of Industry and Commerce and Agriculture will be available at any time to supply advice upon request or provide needed information.

By early May the community committees will meet to receive the various reports from their sub-committees and to produce a consolidated report for their entire area. These reports will then be submitted to the respective regional development corporations and the regional development branch of the Manitoba Department of Industry and Commerce before the end of June.

Mr. Evans stressed that these reports would receive serious consideration from the provincial government. "No fewer than five cabinet ministers and the six presidents of southern Manitoba's regional development corporations will form a Southern Manitoba Regional Development Committee to assess the various reports and to devise means for ensuring effective provincial co-operation in helping carry out the various community proposals."

Keep rape crop weed free

In the last ten years rapeseed has progressed from the point of being a minor to being the third largest crop in terms of acreage. It has provided cash income and diversified cropping for the prairie farmer. Canada is now the major exporter of rapeseed and competes in the world edible oil market.

With the large increase in acreage, however, comes a multiplication of problems as well. The incidence of disease such as white rust appears to be on the increase. Insect problems are becoming much more prominent as was demonstrated by the 1971 infestation of Bertha army worm. Other insect problems are beet webworm and flea beetle. In addition, the weed problems in rapeseed areas seem to be on the increase. Possibly because herbicide use on this crop has been low, especially broadleaf weedkillers, there has been an increased return of seeds to the soil during the growing of rapeseed crops. It is essential to prevent weed seeds from maturing in other crops in the rotation. In other words, when wheat, barley, flax or other alternative crops are grown, particular attention should be paid to weed control to prevent the buildup of weed seeds and the spread of undesirable species.

Solutions Available

This is particularly true in the case of what are termed hard-to-kill weeds such as wild buckwheat, cow cockle, tartary buckwheat, and lady's thumb. They are referred to as hard-to-kill because often they are resistant to 2,4-D and MCPA treatments and set seed in spite of being sprayed with these chemicals.

A relatively new herbicide, bromoxynil, which is a constituent of "Buctril" M, is particularly useful in that it gives an excellent control of these hard-to-kill weeds as well as the common ones such as mustard and stinkweed. Timely use of this chemical and other weed control measures in cereals will tend to reduce weed problems in subsequent rapeseed crops.

Rapeseed has been a valued addition to the crops of Western Canada but weeds are becoming a matter of increasing concern. Besides weed control in rape itself, good control of weeds in other crops grown on the same land must be obtained. The availability of chemicals such as bromoxynil can prove especially useful in this regard.

The first issue of the Reston Recorder came off the press on Thursday, July 27th, 1965. Manning Bros., were the publishers.
